INAUGURATION MATTERS.

Announcements of New Committee

Chairman Britton of the Inaugural Committee went to New York last night and to-day the stream of visitors was diverted from his office to that of the vice chairman, M. M. Parker. The committee announce to-day the appointment of Mr. L. D. Wine, chairman Committee on Street Decoration.

Accommodations have been secured for 150 members of the Buffalo League at the Metropolitan hotel. Mr. O. P. Letchworth is president of the organization, which is composed of the most sub-stantial men of Buffalo. They have made a contract with the hotel for five d vs at $4 a day. The president of the famous Republican Glee Club of Columbus, Ohio, has written to Mr. Britton, requesting the official recognition of the inaugural ceremonies, and letters have also been writ-Senator Sherman and Representa tive Converse indorsing this request. This club is an organization of a eighty of the first young men of Colum-bus. The organization is twenty years old and has taken part in the campaigns of 1872.76 80-84-88. Their services are always in great demand both in Ohio and in the neighboring States,

The committee have decided to give them some recognition, but in just what way has not been decided. It was suggested that the club be given a position on the platform with the President and have them sing some national anthem immediately after the President takes the oath or that they sing during the intermissions in the inaugural ball.

Hayward & Hutchinson have offered to furnish any gas fixtures that the committee may require, but as the Atlantic Building is amply supplied with such fixtures the offer was declined and a vote of thanks extended. The committee will move into their quarters as soon as they are furnished.

THE EVENING POST.

WASHINGTON, TUESDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 20, 1888.

THE PRESIDENT AT OAK VIEW. THE BAPTIST CONVENTION. He Will There Complete His Last Annual Message. Special to the New York Times.

The Metropolitan Church Persists in Its Withdrawal.

THE MATTER CAUSES A STIR.

Oil is Poured on the Troubled Waters and All is Serene

The eleventh annual meeting of the Columbia Association of Baptist Chari-ties was called to order at 11 o'clock this morning by Professor O. T. Mason at Calvary Baptist Church. Devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Faunce, and the president of the association, Professor Mason, read his address, and Secretary Yeatman read reports from various churches. Nominations for chairman of meeting were declared in order, and G. W. McCullough and R. C. Fox successively declined the nominations. The name of Charles A. Stakely was then proposed, and he was elected chairman. S. M. Yeatman was elected secretary and Henry Beard treasurer. The chairman appointed S. H. Green, J. C. Welling and W. S. Olive to form a committee on the order of exercises.

A Little Stir Caused. A communication was received from the Metropolitan Baptist Church stating that owing to the unpleasant relations which existed between the association and that church last year, necessitating the withdrawal of the church from the association, and which relations re-mained unchanged, the church would not send a delegation.

The reading of the communication created a stir and Mr. A. M. Clapp said that the letter was out of order and moved that it be not received by the association but returned to the church. Rev. S. H. Green took the part of peace-maker, however, and suggested that the matter lay over for further consideration, which was ordered.

After a song and prayer a recess was taken until 1:30 o'clock. The ladies of the church then invited the brethren to a lunch, which had been prepared by them in the Sunday School room.
At 1:30 the convention reconvened.

and after devotional exercises proceeded to routine business. To-night the Rev. C. A. Stakely will preach the anniversary sermon. The following were the delegates present:

THE BRITISH MINISTER'S SALE.

The Auction Continues With Unabated Interest at Lord Sackville's.

The sale of the personal effects of Lord Sackville was continued to-day at attendance was, if anything, larger than that of vesterday. The big ball-room of the legation building was packed and the bidders had some difficulty in making their voices heard above the buzz of conversation and the running fire of com ment brought out by each new article put up for sale. It was evident that Lord Sackville did not intend to take back any of his American possessions to bathtubs, a work on etiqueite, a set of ivory poker chips, a silk dress finely embroidered, worn during the time of Louis XVI; a silver shoe buttoner, a pair of opera glasses and an envelope opener All the articles brought more than they were worth. The chinaware was bought by hotel keepers, and most of the wine vent the same road.

Little trifles, German favors and other articles, more of the nature of souvenirs than of anything else, went off at prices probably greater than their original cost.

Lord Sackville has kept enough furniture to make life at the legation bearable during the short period that he will remain here. He and his daughters, the Misses West, took luncheon with friends tooday.

Assignments Recorded.

A deed was placed on record to-day by which W. B. Parnell & Co., grocers and liquor dealers, make an assignment of their liquor dealers, make an assignment of their atock, etc., to A. T. Holtzman, in trust for the purpose of closing business and for the benefit of creditors.

LOOKING IN VAIN FOR ANNIE,

Washington, Nov. 19,-The President | One of the Pupils of St. Rose's School will to-morrow go to Oak View to remain until after he has completed the writing of his annual message to Congress, which is not yet begun, and which he finds it will be utterly impossible to prepare if he does not escape from the interruptions unavoidable while staying at the White House. Visitors are quite as numerous as ever, and take up almost as much time. As only two weeks intervene this date and the meeting of Congress, the President has not reserved a great deal of time for his work.

As usual, however, he has all the topics of his message well in hand. A great many people manifest a desire each year to have a paragraph on some one particular subject, and they write to the President to ask his attention to the matters in which they have special interest. The suggestions are filed in large envelopes, and, if it is practicable and desirable, allusion is made to them. The bundles of letters, however, are, as a mass, severely neglected, the Presi-neut being unable to do much more than allude to the business presented in the reports of the members of the Cabinet. While at Oak View the President will receive no visitors, and as he does not intend to come in from his country home until the message is completed, the an-nouncement of the fact will save a great many people who contemplate a trip to many people who contemplate a trip to Washington at this time for the purpose of calling on him a great deal of useless

Washington at this time for the purpose of calling on him a great deal of useless trouble.

The President has no plans for the future after the inauguration of Mr. Harrison. He will probably rest for the best part of a year. Whether he will choose New York State for his residence is uncertain. It is by no means improbable that he will go back to his native State. New Jersey, and perhaps to the slope of Orange Mountains near which he was walk. AN OLD MAN'S STORY-

The Case of Samuel P. Ament Against Julia Kurr in Court.

The case of Samuel P. Ament against Julia F. Karr and others was placed on argument in the Court in General Term to-day, Messrs. Freeman and Money appearing for the complainant and Edwards and Barnard for the defendant.

that he has six children, all of whom, except Julia F. Karr, had systematically maltreated him and worried him about his property. He loved this daughter and trusted her implicitly and spentsome time with her in this city during the years 1879, 1880 and 1881. His health was not good; his wife had recently died; his other children had deserted him and Wethenlike Visited. she will not be found to have been ab-ducted by some of the men, or women was not good; his wife had recently died; his other children had deserted him, and he leaned upon her for consolation and comfort.

While in Washington he purchased a house and lot, and had the deed made to her, taking notes from her for the purachase money and advances made for re-pairs. The notes amounted to $8,420, and were secured by deeds of trust to Mesers. Cole & Meyers. He voluntarily promised her that she might occupy the property for life. He states that she wrote him as follows: wrote him as follows:

"Some time ago I wrote you that I could not get the house repaired while you had a mortgage and a lien at the same time. You wrote in answer that you would be willing to remove any mortgage that you might hold and anything that General Brown (her counsel) would suggest for my good in the matter you would be satisfied with. I showed the letter to General Brown and ne understood as I did; we thought that now the only thing that is wanting is to get the sale confirmed. So at last, when the court set, Brown, at my earnest request, acted for me."

After his return home his health was oad and on September 21, 1885, he was found insane under proceedings in-stituted by his son, Samuel M. Ament, the jury finding that he had been insane for a period of six years previous to that date. In 1887 he was declared restored to sanity. He charges that Julia F. Karr aided her brother and sisters in the proceedings. His exact condition was at all times known to her and he was induced the British Legation and the crowd in to leave with her many of his valuable papers. About sixty days before he was de-clared insane she and Cole, he says, had caused a release of the deed of trust without his knowledge or consent. The release was made June 27, 1885, and on July 14, he says, she wrote him a letter breathing the tenderest affection and ex-pressing her deep sorrow for his condi-tion. He declares that Cole and his daughter confederated together to release he deed of trust, which secured $6,425; that it was fraudulent, and that after the release Karr incumbered the property by placing other mortgages on it.

He asks that the releases executed be set aside; that all incumbrances referred to be set aside and that the property may be sold to satisfy his claim. The de-fendant, Mrs. Karr, claims that the money paid for the property was not in advance, but a gift. He had told her that he would take a trust "to protect her from any other creditors she might

C. C. Cole denies the charges of combination to defraud. The complainant had frequently told him, in the course of the transaction, that he was buying the property for his daughter and that he was taking the deed of trust for her protection. When the deed of release was presented to him by her attorney, seeing the notes in her possession marked "paid," he did not hesitate to execute the release. MRS. SMITH'S GREAT ANGUISH.

Marion D. Newman-St. Clair-De Hughes Placed on Trial.

SHE GAVE, NOT LENT HIM MONEY. She Loved Him, Notwithstanding He Was Married.

Marion G. Newman, with his handsome assortment of allases, his goldheaded umbrella and his shiny sills tile, appeared in the Police Court about noon to-day to answer to the charge of obtainining $49 from Mrs. Kate Smith, who answered his advertisement for a wife.

Mrs. Smith came into court dissolved in tears. She wore a long dark-blue wrap closely fitted to her largely rounded form. Under the wrap was a handsome eeru fall street dress with a vest of silk of a lighter shade. The upper part of her face was covered by a black veil reaching a trifle below her nose. She wore a small red bonnet ornamented with black beads. She was given a chair when she took the stand, and sat with her back toward the curious andience in the contractor. Mrs. Smith came into court dissolved

She seemed unable to talk on account of her sobbs, and testified by modding "yes" or "no" to the questions put by Prosecuting Attorney Shillington. The court room was crowded, and among the audience were a number of women whose faces reidened from time to time as references were made to the number of answers Mr. Newman's ad-vertisements elicited.

A big bundle of letters was brought into court, but none of them were read.

Another big bundle contained Mr.
Newman's letters to Mrs. Smith and from these numerous extracts were read.

Mrs. Smith on the Stand. Mrs. Smith was the first witness heard, and she seemed very anxious to say nothing that would injure her exbetrothed.

She was asked if she gave Mr. Newman the $49 because she thought him unmarried and because she expected him to marry her.
She also declared that their engagement had been broken before she gave Mrs. Smith used the word "gave" every time she referred to the transfer of her money to him. She said that she had on several occasions offered Mr. Newman various sums of money, and that he had refused it.

She was asked why she did this, and she sobbed out that she couldn't account for her actions. Such portions of Newman's letters as were read showed letter-writing ability were read showed letter-writing ability of an unusual order. He combined love and finances in a most graceful fashion, and the reading of his letters evoked a great deal of merriment.

Mrs. Newman reiterated her declaration that she had given Newman the money of her own free will, and not because of any solicitation or promises on Newman's part. Newman's part.
The files of Tire Post containing Mr. Newman's advertisement, which he identified, were put in evidence and the cleverly-worded advertisement read to betective Raff was called after Mrs. Smith had left the stand, and told how Mrs. Smith complained to Officer Block day evening remains as ispenetrable as ever, Of and how after Mr. Newman's arrest she the police in discharging them last night in bonds of $3,000 each. Tom Masterson, the switchman at Thirty-ninth street and Michigan avenue, however, is held. He tells a highly probable story of his meeting with her Saurday night in the light of the saurday night in the saurday night riage, covering a whole sheet of big "legal cap" paper between St. Clair, which was one of Newman's alleged aliases, and a Miss Noble. The detective said that Newman admitted being a married man.

> to marry Mrs. Smith, his answer was that he would "get her out, and then give her the slip easy enough. While Mr. Raff was giving his testi-mony, which was as injurious to Mrs. Smith's feelings as to Mr. Newman's case, she sat with ner face hidden in her hands and her forehead resting against the dingy wainscotting, and from time to time her well rounded form

When he asked him how he expected shook convulsively with her sobs. Detective Horne was called and cor-roborated what Detective Raff had said. Officer Block told how he had arrested Newman on Mrs. Smith's complaint, and how she charged him with obtaining money by false pretenses in Newman's Smith had told him that she had just $50 and she gave him a dollar to get thing to eat and some drinks," and afterward loaned him the $49. Then Mrs. Smith was recalled, and sobbingly testified that she cared so much for Mr. Newman that she gave him the $49 because she liked him, whether he was married to some other woman or not. She admitted that she had several times told the police that she didn't wish to prosecute Mr. Newman, and that she gave him her $49 of her own free will and not because she expected the money back.

The more closely Mrs. Smith was questioned the more violently she sobbed and finally her examination was given up in dispair of eliciting anything of value to either the prosecution or the defense. In disposing of the case Judge Miller said: "I have been reading these letters (Newman's) very carefully. They breathe the utmost arder of devotion but through every line there is the trait of the dollar. The attempt of a rogue to sy work upon this lady's feelings that she will give him money." But that would not have been the crime of false pretenses if there had been nothing preceeding it. Legally it was not a crime though it was a moral one. Then when she offered him the money he was after he coquetted with it-pre-tended he did not want it-but he never let get out of his sight.

"If he had gone to Mrs. Smith and said, 'Mrs. Smith, I'm a married man; I've got a wife in Jackson, and God knows where else, she would never have given the money. I'll send the case to the grand jury in bonds of $500." Mrs. Smith broke into sobbs. and rushed from the court room in a shower of tears, and the great Lothario Newman case was over for a while at least.

THE EUROPEAN OUTLOOK.

The Politicians Puzzled at the Condition of Affairs.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—European politicians are becoming more puzzled than ever at the possible complications of the triple alliance. The advantages which Austria and Italy will reap from it become more obvious every day, and it is certain that Germany is satisfied with he situation. Italy is relieved from the ear which she has already felt of France, and in the exuitation of her deiverance has made claims which would have seemed presumptuous some years

The wine-inspired speech of the Italian General, who proclaimed that henceforth there was to be no thorough-fare across the Alps, testifies to the national feeling, but military critics place little dependence upon the morale of the Italia settles. Italian soldier. It is a point worth remarking that, so far off as China, the force of the central alliance has made itself felt. The Celestial Government has yielded the point that in future the Italian missionaries that in future the Italian missionaries who are engaged in the benevolent, but seemingly fruitless, task of converting the heathen in that country, shall have for their safeguards passports in the name of their own country instead of that of France, as heretofore.

The shrewd rulers over the destinies of China must have become convinced of the increased importance of Italy before changing the traditional policy of the conservative empire in such a suggestive manner. France has always by diplomacy and force of arms endeavored to imacy and force of arms endeavored to impress upon Eastern nations an idea of her importance among European powers, and although reverses have befallen her in her attempts lately, she will not re-linquish her idea for any slight consid-

It will be galling to national pride to have their supremacy in the orient in-terfered with, but the attacks upon the budget have shown it to be very likely that economy will outweigh sentiment for the future, and the financial outlook of France is one demanding serious consideration.
